

SIXTH FRAMEWORK
PROGRAMME

Have you ever considered that Europeans share linguistic knowledge despite having different mother tongues? When using English interculturally as a lingua franca non-native interlocutors often employ similar strategies - as in our example: both speakers use 'information' as a count noun and thereby exhibit common ground and communicate successfully.